

Carbon Policy

General Policy Objectives

CAD Group is an Electrical, Mechanical and Process Engineering Company specialising in servicing the resource sectors of Australia.

CAD Group understands community focus on global warming, fossil fuels, sustainability of resources and its associated carbon emissions are contributing towards climate change. This has led to both domestic and international initiatives and proposed initiatives by government to reduce environmentally damaging emissions and enhance the opportunities for renewable technologies.

CAD Group recognises its individual responsibility to manage carbon emissions as well as understand and manage any business risks that arise from market and regulatory developments.

Strategies of success

CAD Group is committed to following areas:

Understanding CAD Groups carbon footprint:

CAD Group will improve its understanding of the type and scope of carbon emitted through the operational activities. We will action to continuously improve measurement of this carbon footprint.

Improving management of carbon emissions:

CAD Group will look to identify opportunities to manage carbon emissions in its business and consider carbon emissions in business planning processes. Areas of focus will include:

- Encouraging energy efficiency across our operations
- Fuel efficiency and emissions reduction in CAD Group's fleet management arrangements.
- Considering energy efficient alternatives in any re-developments and fit-outs.

Working with staff, employees, contractors, visitors and others:

CAD Group will explore opportunities to assist staff, employees, contractors, visitors and others in reducing their own carbon footprint.

Business risks:

- CAD Group will monitor market and regulatory developments to ensure understanding of;
- Our exposure to new regulatory requirements or other initiatives by Federal or State governments.
- How this impacts on suppliers and clients
- Implications to our costing's and revenue

Application

CAD Group will implement, review and maintain these systems, inclusive of standards, policies and procedures. These standards will be monitored regularly to ensure their integrity and effectiveness

This policy applies to all staff, employees and contractors whilst employed by CAD Group Pty Ltd.
